Mrs. A. J. George Says Selfish Interests Should Be Subordinated to Service for State.

Mrs. A. J. George, director of branches Mrs. A. J. George, director of branches of the National Security League, yesterday urged the students of the training camp at Chevy Chase to learn that discipline which subordinates selfish interest to the service of the State. Speaking on the topic of social preparedness, Mrs. George said in part:

ing on the topic of social preparedness, Mrs. George said in part:
"Preparedness cannot come with dreams over night; it comes only from the determination of a people to face the duties imposed upon them by new occasions. Military preparedness, industrial preparedness—these are questions for experts, but the will to serve, the self-denial of the individual, the subordination of personal ambition and of class interest to the common weal, these are the foundation stones of the structure of national defense; these make for social preparedness." ture of national defe social preparedness."
